PUNCTUATION NOTE

COMMA

Study the following sentences:

- If you knew my real identity, you wouldn't kill me.
- When the fisherman returned home, he found an enormous palace.
- When he got to the sea, it was all green and yellow.

The above sentences are composed of two parts: a dependent and an independent clause. An independent clause is a group of words with a subject and a verb that can stand alone and make sense. An independent clause expresses a complete thought by itself and can be written as a separate sentence.

- The sea was all green and yellow.
- He found an enormous palace.

A dependent clause is a group of words with a subject and a verb that depends on an independent clause to give it meaning.

- If you knew my real identity
- When he got to the sea

Note: Use a comma after a dependent clause that appears before the independent clause.

Dependent Clause, + Independent Clause.

Independent Clause + Dependent Clause.

- If I were King I would own all this land.
- I would own all this land if I were King.
